There are no stupid questions.

This is a partnership.

And it's a balancing act!

Without caregivers' questions, educators don't know if you're getting the right amount of:

information

advice

support

I hope parents will ask me...

What should I change?

What resources does your family need?

When should I contact you about your child missing class?

What is your correction/late work/missing assignments policy?

Teachers are always wondering: Are your students still benefitting from the virtual lessons? In what ways?

What Educators Need from Caregivers

Set your student up for success. Be sure they have:

- Quiet workspace

- All the necessary materials BEFORE the lesson begins

- Help managing their assignments and time

- Appropriate technology

- Daily reading practice

Your grace, patience and support.
